Deeper Learning Advocates

Don Berg is the host of the Agentic Schools Podcast and an award-winning author.

As the Executive Director of Deeper Learning Advocates he is on a mission to embed the psychology of learning in policy so policy stops undermining learning.

He presents at conferences internationally.

Peer-reviewed journals have published his research.

He has over 20 years of experience leading children in self-directed educational settings. The Joyful Llama Ranch in West Linn, Oregon is his home.

A Local Action Plan for Global Systems Change

Bureaucratic standards are a disaster in schools, but that does not mean that all forms of standardization should be abandoned. You will learn about a model for using standardization in order to create a psychologically healthy environment by limiting imposed authority and optimizing agency. The scientific foundation for this model is Self-Determination Theory.

The presentation will take 20 minutes or less, there will be a brief demonstration of a climate assessment tool, and then a facilitated discussion will ensue.

Standardization Reconsidered: Do not throw the education baby out with the bureaucratic bathwater.

Would you like to create a global system of education that is respectful and sustainable? Are you tired of waiting for the rich and powerful to take the right actions (or never expected them to)?

Deeper Learning Advocates has a plan that will enable you to act locally to organize your community using a process that aligns allies with a moral foundation that can transcend the pedagogical and other differences that stand in our way.

Join Don Berg, Executive Director of Deeper Learning Advocates for this presentation about the global strategy that requires local action.
